

Statement from Kit Marlatt, son of G. Alan Marlatt:

“Alan Marlatt was more than an eminent clinical psychologist. He was also a father and grandfather, a husband, a lover, a teacher, a Buddhist.

He loved moments of peace and quiet, the gathering of friends and colleagues and moments of joy. He laughed with a twinkle in his baby-blues. He was a writer, a mentor and a muse. He played piano and had a deep love of music.

He traveled the world and every time I hear a train whistle I think of my dad.

He passed away peacefully in his own bed with his wife on one side and me and my wife on the other. We held his hands and helped him let go and cross the threshold from this life into the next.

He was in no pain, no suffering. He was in his beloved summer home in Warm Beach, Washington looking up through the skylights, watching the eagles soar and the rain gently fall.”

G. Alan Marlatt is survived by his wife Kathryn Moore, his son Christopher Alan (Kit) Marlatt and his daughter-in-law Ashley Rachel Marlatt, his half-brother Robert Whitehead, his step-daughters Melanie and Charlotte Miller and Iara Coltrim, his step-son Colin Maclay, step-granddaughters Amanda and Seraphina White, and his grandson Aidan-Jack Marlatt.
